

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of sound synthesizing in which characteristics of a plurality of harmonics of a sampled sound are first absorbed into a wave-table so that a sound can be synthesized from a reduced number of harmonic envelopes for efficient processing while preserving fidelity. This method is particularly good for synthesizing the sound of a string instrument.